Synopsis:

From the novel Minchia di Re by Giacomo Pilati comes a scandal hidden in 19th century

Sicily between two young women, Angela and Sara. Angela isn't like other girls her age, she fears nothing and nobody. She can't hide her feelings for Sara. To maintain the forbidden relationship, she changes her outward appearance to disguise herself as a man. The chains that had imprisoned her existence suddenly disappear and she becomes powerful, but in her heart she never denies her identity as a woman. As intense and compelling as only young love can be, the two women challenge the rules of society in order to be together.

Directed by Donatella Maiorca and starring Valeria Solarino, Isabella Ragonese, Ennio Fantastichini.

NOTES ON THE FILM

Viola di Mare (Purple Sea) is a story about the love of two young women, Angela and Sara, who have both grown up in the same historical microcosm surrounded by hauntingly beautiful scenery.

The plot is based on real events that took place on one of the islands near Sicily in the second half of the 19th century, events which were handed down by word of mouth over generations of country-folk till they are woven into a legend. This legend is brought to life again by the narrative craft of cinema, that kind of artistic cinema which is capable of showing universal truths behind a historical event and that can touch the hearts of its audience by working its spell through innovative techniques.

Thus, the story of Angela and Sara, with their love for each other, the courage to face the truth and their hunger for justice, becomes the story of each man and woman today as well as yesterday. This magic is brought about perhaps by the enthusiasm and commitment of its creators, an almost totally female team, perhaps by the beauty of the landscape or the masterly performance of the actors but certainly by the bravery and determination of the production.

Viola di Mare is a story about a love that is as intense and compelling as only young love can be, but it also speaks about challenging the rules of society. The film shows up abuses, social injustices and the age-long oppression of women, everything the protagonist Angela staunchly fights against.

Yet just as staunchly she besieges Sara, sometimes frantically, sometimes with tenderness, and she will not cease until Sara gives in to her passion. The two make a bold pact which they undertake almost as if they were drawing on the life force, driven by a spirit awakening from the torpor of social conventions.

The forces which she fights against will exact a high price but Angela is ready to pay it. She agrees to completely change her outward appearance, disguising herself as a man, but in her heart she never denies her identity as a woman.

In the film, the various stages of their passion, the moments of awareness, of joy, happiness and sorrow, are interwoven with the seasons of nature and its patterns, sometimes radiant and peaceful, sometimes raging, and these give a rhythm to the unfolding of the story.

The narrative structure finds unexpected closure which, though painful, serves to reaffirm the heroine's identity and give meaning to the law of desire, the only law, Angela seems to say, for which it is worth paying the final price.

Pina Mandolfo

ABOUT PINA MANDOLFO

Screenwriter

Born in Belpasso, a small town on the slopes of Etna, after completing her degree in Foreign Languages and Literature, as a lover of her native land, Pina Mandolfo has continued to live and work in Sicily, first in Catania and since 2000 moving between Palermo and the memory-filled countryside surrounding Syracuse where she spent her teenage years.

Pina has a particular scholarly interest in the processes of innovation and in the theme of gender difference and works mainly in both literary and cinema research and writing.

She has written for the magazines "Lapis" e "Noi donne" (We Women) as well as for the Sicily's daily newspaper "La Sicilia". From 1978 to 1982 in Catania she organised several cinema events showing films in their original language. With the financial support of the Sicilian Regional Assembly and Catania City Council, Pina has put together a number of film reviews, also being responsible for editing the accompanying catalogues. These include: Il reale e l'immaginario ('The Imaginary and the Real', Catania, 1981); L'immagine riflessa ('The Reflected Image', Catania, 1982); Sesso, genere e travestitismi al cinema (Sex, Gender and Travestism', Catania, 1994); Sally Potter e Virginia Woolf. Rappresentazione e autorappresentazione del femminile ('Sally Potter and Virginia Woolf. Female Representation and Self-representation', Catania 1995); Vuoti di memoria. Il '900 delle donne: film e documenti televisivi (Memory Gaps. Women in the 20th Century: Films and TV Documentaries', Palermo, 2007); Dalla parte di lei: le donne, la vita, il cinema (On Her Side: Women, Life and Film', Palermo, 2009).

1996 saw Pina Mandolfo among the founders of the Italian Society for Women in The Arts (Società Italiana delle Letterate ) where she took part in the first two committee meetings.

In 2004, in collaboration with the University of Palermo, she organised a public meeting with the Mothers of the Plaza de Mayo.

Pina is author of the novel Desiderio , 'Desire', (La Tartaruga Baldini & Castoldi, Milan, 1995), editions of which have also appeared in Germany and Switzerland (Das Begehren, Piper, Munich, 1996). She has also published a number of essays including: Il sud delle donne, le donne del sud, 'The South for Women & Women of the South', (in Cartografie dell'Immaginario , Sossella, Rome, 2000); La felicità delle narrazioni , 'Happiness in Story-telling', (in Lingua bene comune , Città aperta, 2006); as well as several short stories such as: Una necessità chiamata famiglia , 'The Need for Family' (Leggendaria , May 2001); Racconto di fine anno, ' ATale for the End of the Year', (in Principesse azzurre , Mondadori, 2004).

Together with Maria Grazia Lo Cicero Pina Mandolfo has written the screenplay and directed the following short films: Carpe Diem (funded by the Provincial Council of Palermo, 2005); Silenzi e Bugie, 'Silence and Lies' (funded by the EU, 2006), overall winner of the Sottodiciotto Film Festival in Turin and winner of the CIAS prize for film and school; Mandolfo and Cicero also worked together on the longer film Correva l'anno 'Year', (2008). Mandolfo has written the screenplay for Viola di mare (out in October, 2009) as well as co-writing the script alongside Mario Cristiani, Donatella Diamanti and Donatella Maiorca.

Pina Mandolfo's writing and artistic production centres are steeped in memories, the land of Sicily and its women. Cinema, the promotion of women's knowledge and learning, the theme of difference, particularly that of gender difference, form a central part of her work and political and public identity.
